

HE JABS NECK WITH KNIFE

Laborer, Tired of Life, Found Unconscious in Pool of Blood.

In an attempt to end his life, Ole Filto, a Finnish laborer, slashed his throat yesterday afternoon and finding he had not cut deep enough to kill himself, though weak from loss of blood, he continued jabbing at his throat with a sharp knife. The man was in his room at 315 North Fourteenth street, and was not discovered until several hours later lying unconscious in a pool of blood.

Despondency over continued sickness and his inability to get work, he says, prompted the deed. He was taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital and was attended by Dr. James C. Zan. It is not believed he will recover. Filto came here four months ago from Bibeck, Mont., where he has a brother. He has been sick since coming here.
