
NORWEGIAN LABORER

FALLS TO DEATH OFF

SATSOP RIVER BRIDGE

ABERDEEN, Feb. 28.—(Special)—Elias Quammen, a Norwegian laborer, whose home is in Seattle, met his death at Satsop, 15 miles east of here, yesterday afternoon, by falling from the bridge across the Satsop river. He had come from his home to see about getting work in railroad construction. With two other men he was crossing the bridge, when he missed his footing and fell headlong to the ground, striking on his head, crushing the skull, causing instant death. He was 22 years old and unmarried.
