

HOW YOU LOSE.

Under reasonable protection American labor can work in the American lumber mills or logging camps in competition only with American labor.

Under free trade American labor is largely out of work in Oregon. The only possible way for an idle logger or an idle sawmill hand to get work will be to go to British Columbia and compete there at reduced labor with Hindu labor.

Which is worse, to buy the output of Hindu labor from British Columbia mills and throw our labor out of employment, or to bring in the Hindu labor itself in order to keep our mills going?

Either way the American laborer loses.
